Abstract: Trying to Predict Stock Market Closing Prices

The project consists of statistical analysis of stock data from the S&P 500 index with which we want to build a reliable predictive model in order to make intelligent predictions in the stock market. The statistical analysis program we used to work with the data was the R language in a jupyter notebook, which is more accessible and allows us to be able to save every output we call.